

Worksheet 1.11b: How human rights affect our lives

Which scenarios are relevant to which human rights? Write the number of the relevant human right beneath the scenario.

A.

I caught my neighbour filming me on her phone when I was in my garden today. I asked her to stop and she wouldn't. We've never met before, so it made me really uncomfortable.

B.

I wanted to vote yesterday, but my father told me daughters and wives shouldn't have a say in how a country is run. He locked me in my room all day.

C.

A family friend has been physically abusing me for years. She says it's because my writing's messy. Today's attack was the worst – I need to go to hospital.

D.

I bought a house last year. The government has just brought in a new law, though. It says that you can only keep your house if you join their political party.

E.

I've been wrongly accused of theft. A local judge has been tweeting about me, saying that I must be guilty because I was brought up in a poor area.

F.

Our new President just banned over-40s from working. She says we're too old to keep up with new technologies.

G.

My teacher says if I want to stay in the school then I'll have to change my views on abortion. My view is that it's acceptable in a few special situations.

H.

Six of us met in a park last week for some bible study. The police arrested us within an hour. All we were doing was quietly reading and having a picnic.
