DEFINITIONS

Under the law, there are different categories of discrimination, with differences in the legal framework surrounding them. These are:

Direct discrimination: Is unlawful for all protected grounds except, in some circumstances, age and disability in schools. Direct Discrimination is when a person is treated less favourably than others in comparable circumstances because of a special characteristic such as sex, race or a disability. In the case of direct age discrimination, this is unlawful only if it cannot be objectively justified.

Indirect Discrimination: In essence occurs when a provision, criterion or practice is applied equally to all but has a different impact on members of one or more protected groups, of which the complainant is one, and is placed at a disadvantage as a result. Indirect discrimination is unlawful unless it can be justified for reasons unrelated to the characteristic in question. (An example might be a physical strength test, which would discriminate against women, and which might be justified in relation to a job necessitating heavy lifting, but not in relation to teaching.)

Victimisation – treating a person less favourably because they have taken action in respect of discrimination, e.g. by bringing a complaint or giving evidence for a colleague – is also unlawful.

Harassment – unwanted conduct which violates a person's dignity or creates an intimidating, hostile, degrading, humiliating or offensive environment for them, on grounds of one of the relevant characteristics such as sex or race – is also unlawful in many of the situations covered by discrimination law.

Gender Reassignment - Including people who have expressed an intention to undergo, are undergoing or have completed a process of gender reassignment.

Sexual Orientation - Discrimination on grounds of perceived as well as actual sexual orientation, and/or that of friends or associates of the person discriminated against is also unlawful.

Age - in some cases, direct or indirect discrimination on grounds of age may be lawful if it can be shown to be objectively justified.

Religion – The requirement not to discriminate on grounds of religion or belief is expected to come into effect from April 2017. Regulations are also planned which will prohibit discrimination against pupils or potential pupils on grounds of sexual orientation
